

Announcing the California Forest Pest Council 58th Annual Meeting:

What's Ailing California's Forests?

November 17-18, 2009
Heidrick Ag Center, 1962 Hays Lane,
Woodland, CA

The California Forest Pest Council, founded in 1951 is comprised of private and public forest managers, entomologists, pathologists and other interested in the protection of forests from damage caused by animals, insects, pathogens and weeds. The 58th annual meeting will provide the membership a chance to review 2009 California forest health status and issues, formulate and vote on resolutions and address topics of special concern. Membership in the CFPC is granted to anyone attending the meetings.

Tuesday, November 17th, will cover issues on forest insects and pathogens, and conclude with a social, and a poster session featuring "What's wrong with my tree? Stump the Experts". Participants are encouraged to bring in samples for identification.

Wednesday, November 18th includes information on the new insect in southern California the Goldspotted oak borer, thousand cankers on Walnut, and a "Firewood: A risk to California Forest Health?" panel.

We look forward to seeing you!
